In The Celtic languages 2 (2009), pp. 22–27.

8145. Eska (Joseph F.): Where have all the object pronouns gone? The growth of object agreement in earlier Celtic.
Argues that the Old Irish morphemes traditionally regarded as infixed and suffixed object pronouns are instead markers of object agreement.

Argues that non-etymological vowels in Ogam are not engravers’ errors but early evidence for swanbhakti.
